Shooting lions on the run From a hundred yards away Think you this is risky fun? Not a bit of it, we say; If your courage you would show With a nerve that doesn't fail, Grapple him without a blow-Lead him homeward by the tail.

Groping through the jungle wild, Shooting tigers, hit or miss, Tis the courage of a child That would turn a trick like this; Leave your gun behind and creep Softly, with no touch of fear, Jump upon him while asleep, Yank him outward by the ear.

Who is it that could not hit In the four-by-twenty head Elephants that calmly sit While you pepper them with lead? But it takes a deeper spunk On the hardy jungle tramp When you pluck one by the trunk And escort him back to camp.

Where's the nerve in taking aim At a boa constrictor's eye? Any kid could play that game And undoubtedly get by; But the job's another size When you seize and drag him through, Handing him, despite his cries, To the keeper of the Zoo.

Eddic Collins proved well enough that the proper sort of left-handed batsman is under no great handleap facing left-handers from the rifle pit. In the late series Eddie put in most of his time facing southpaws. He stood against Sallee, Schupp and Benton, with only a few scattered shots at Poll Perritt. Yet Collins emerged with an average well above .400, The answer as to why a good left-handed batter can't hit s good left-handed pitcher is simple enough. He can.

Joint Meeting Of Big Leagues Still Up in Air

President Hempstead of Giants Says Such Conference Is Not Needed Yet

By W. J. Macbeth

President John K. Tener of the National League left for Philadelphia last evening without having heard anything further regarding the announced joint meeting of the two major leagues in Chicago a week from to-day.

All three local major league offices Hall were in the dark on Herrmann's announced project. Harry N. Hempstead, of the Giants, expressed the opinion live that it was unlikely such a conference would take place in the immediate future, primarily because there was no pressing need of it. He, however, will not oppose the idea if the matter comes to a vote at the annual meeting of the National League in this city next Tues-

In all probability, the National League not having pledged itself on the subject, Mr. Herrmann is more than likely to put his suggestion squarely up to his confederates.

May Postpone Meeting

It would not be at all surprising, if a joint meeting should be held, that it would be delayed until the annual spring gathering of the National Commission in Cincinnati on January 7. A delay of a few weeks might do no harm. The rival major magnates would then have plenty of time to deliberate upon the various points of difference between their respective policies and avoid the danger of hasty action.

The schedule proposition seems to have become a minor issue. The roster looks his fint feat team The American League is to s man behind Johnson's suggestion to limit the roster to eighteen players. There is some talk now that the two leagues may side-step definite schedule policies for the time. There is no occasion for hurry in this matter, as neither side holds its schedule meeting until February. By marking time the operators could get a more definite line on how far the next draft will affect players of high calibre. Later they might make their plans accordingly, whereas now they would be shooting more or less in the dark.

until February. By marking time the operators could get a more definite line on how far the next draft will affect players of high calibre. Later they might make their plans accordingly, whereas now they would be shooting more or less in the dark.

Post-Season Series

Also, it is said, certain magnates of both leagues are willing to have tried out a scheme which Barney Dreyfus has had in mind for many years. This is a new form of world series, embracing a post-season series for the championship of the world, in which each National League club would meet each American League club in home-and-home series.

It was just such a project as was arranged between the American Association and the International League last winter, but which fell through because President Hickey of the Association got a case of cold feet after the season was well under way. He was cause President Hickey of the Associa-tion got a case of cold feet after the season was well under way. He was afraid of the travelling expenses inarraid of the travelling expenses involved.

This inter-league series between the two big minors would have satisfied the majors as to the advisability of such a scheme for the world pennant. But unfortunately it did not take place, and the Dreyfus suggestion is right where it was the past four or five years.

Many major league magnates would like to see it tried, but, like Hickey, they fear to vote for any innovation, preferring to let well enough alone. There is an excuse this year for the change. The world series between the White Sox and Giants last fall did not draw up to the standard. Indeed, it draw up to the standard. Indeed, it has been felt for the past two years that the annual classic might be improved in some manner. War-time conditions leave the loophole of excuse, if the majors care to embrace the op
